

IMPACTS OF TOURISM IN ANTARCTICA

- Between 1992 and 2020 the number of tourists visiting Antarctica increased ten-fold and continues to grow, meaning the negative environmental impacts of tourism are likely to increase.
- Existing regulations do not adequately protect the environment of Antarctica from tourism impacts, which include damage at visitor sites and along travel routes, and the disturbance of wildlife.
- [REDACTED] which risk the [REDACTED] help regulate the global climate.
- Tourism in Antarctica must be effectively and proactively managed, with new safeguards based on [REDACTED] Between 19 [REDACTED]

