

Save the Rhino Trust CEO Honoured with Prestigious International Conservation Award

23 November, London United Kingdom. Simson !Uri- Khob, Save the Rhino Trust Chief Executive Officer has been recognised for his lifetime commitment and contribution to African conservation. Mr !Uri- Khob has been awarded the Prince William Lifetime Achievement Award. The annual ceremony

Cambridge addressed the 2021 winners saying that the work they do has never been more to our economies, jobs and livelihoods, but for health, well-

Images downloaded here

About Save the Rhino Trust

Save the Rhino Trust is one of the oldest black rhino conservation organizations on the planet. Today it is estimated that there are fewer than 6,000 black rhinos left in the wild, and, with poaching continuing across the continent, the critically endangered black rhinos' last stand may be in north-western Namibia. It is here that SRT works tirelessly to protect one of the last, free-roaming populations of black rhinos left in the world.

Covering an area of 25,000 km², SRT's trackers come from local communities and possess a deep knowledge of rhinos and their surroundings. Their skills are tested during long patrols, on foot on rough terrain in an area with no national park status. SRT is the only non-government organisation with a Memorandum of understanding with Namibia's Ministry of Environment and Tourism to monitor rhinos in their natural range. www.savetherhinotrust.org