

Skydive

Please show your support for saving South Africa's black and white rhinos

We received two photographs via email a couple of weeks ago. The first was of a butchered rhino cow—her tiny, orphaned calf nuzzling her mother's bloody, mutilated head. The other photo was of a different rhino; this one was still alive but swaying blindly

Donations to Skydive For

WHAT: 30 staff members and supporters of the African Conservation Trust will be leaping out of a plane to raise awareness and funding for poaching activities that are urgently needed to protect South Africa's remaining black and white rhino populations.

WHEN: 6 August 2011

WHERE: Durban Skydive Centre, Angel's Way Farm in Eston (outside Pietermaritzburg)

WHY: The Skydive for Rhinos will be done by ordinary people who have had enough of the escalating rhino slaughter and who are willing to do something extreme to increase awareness, as well as give other ordinary people a cause they can donate to easily, knowing their support will go where it's needed most.

Please support the brave folk who will be plummeting a 2200' «ü© Skydive for Rhinos
